CONTEXT

Among the reflections generated by the years of the pandemic, the need to adapt childcare services to the new needs arising from change has emerged in the educational field. This can be done through a process of innovation, both of the tools and of the skills of the practitioners in the education field.

GOALS

- Making the job shadowing activity an abitudinal educational good practice, working on the development of cultural exchanges, twinning and international mobility of educators, teachers, collaborators and pedagogical management and coordination staff.
- Investing in the valorisation of internationalisation, through the linguistic improvement of all the profiles involved and the training of the coordination staff's skills. Thus, creating a working group able to accompany the 0-6 Services staff during training courses abroad and to welcome colleagues from other nations.

ACTIONS

- Setting up a mobility flow of educators and teachers at two Swedish educational institutions with the aim of innovating and implementing tools for building inclusive educational contexts.
- Organisation of a training event where a Swedish pedagogist will be welcomed to share the outcomes of the training project with all the city's staff.
- Reinforcing English language and project management skills of the management team.

EXPECTED RESULTS

- Development and enhancement of the quality of the educational and scholastic offer, which will make it possible to influence the constitution of inclusive services "tailored to each child".
- Development of skills on the creation of inclusive learning environments through the structuring of spaces, materials, time, the role of the adult, the organisational model, teaching proposals, communication and documentation of learning processes.
